

Solar Cookers International (SCI)

is seeking experienced solar cooks to conduct solar cooking demonstrations in communities across the U.S. as part of the

ASES National Solar Tour

the largest solar energy event in the world

Saturday, October 4, 2008

(date may vary in some locations)

Volunteer solar cooks will work directly with local tour organizers to determine where and when solar cooking demonstrations will take place for specific tour areas. Each volunteer should have their own solar cooker and be willing to prepare a dish that you can invite tour attendees to taste.

Upon request, SCI will provide volunteer solar cooks with informational handouts for those taking the tour.

Last year the ASES National Solar Tour attracted more than 115,000 attendees in 2,900 participating communities across the U.S. It inspired people to make sustainable energy choices that help lower costs, support energy independence, protect against power outages, and reduce carbon emissions.

This is a great opportunity to promote solar cooking and the work of SCI!

Learn more about the 2008 ASES National Solar Tour, including information about tours near you by visiting:

www.NationalSolarTour.org

If you're interested in conducting a solar cooking demonstration as part of a tour in your area, please use the attached contact information. For handouts or additional assistance, please contact SCI at 916.455.4499.